

Øystein Linnebo
On the Commitments of Plural Logic

I discuss some arguments for and against the view that plural logic incurs a new kind of ontological commitment, paying special attention to what one means – or ought to mean – by the notion of 'ontological commitment'. This discussion will be related in particular to my paper with Agustin Rayo.